SOURCE C

Dearest, I heard that horrid Rodzianko wants the Duma to be called together – oh please don't, it's not their business to discuss things not concerning them and bring more discontent. Listen to our friend Rasputin. God sent him to us and we must pay attention to what he says.

[From part of a letter written in 1916 by the Tsarina Alexandra to Tsar Nicholas commenting on the growing political tension in the capital Petrograd]

SOURCE D

The situation in the capital is serious. The government is paralysed; the transport system is broken down; the food and fuel supplies are completely disorganised. There is wild shooting on the streets; troops are firing at each other. It is urgent that someone who the people trust forms a new government.

[A telegram sent by the leader of the Duma, Rodzianko, to Tsar Nicholas on 27 February, 1917]

QUESTION 4

This question is about the impact of the First World War, 1914-1917.

Study the sources opposite and then answer the question which follows.

Which of the sources is more useful to an historian studying the growing crisis in Russia during the First World War? [12 marks]

[You should refer to both sources in your answer and use your own knowledge and understanding of the historical context.]
