SOURCE A

[Section from an eighteenth-century advertisement for a private company which removed sewage and rubbish from people's houses. Two men are shown outside a house talking to a person standing in the doorway. The men are carrying a pole which has a large open tub suspended from it. They have a small horse-drawn cart with them. In the distance, a large cart is being pulled out of town by a team of horses.]

SOURCE B

[An image from 1874 of the new sewers built by Brighton Council. Men are shown standing in water at the base of a large brick-built tunnel which is underground. Two smaller tunnels feed into the larger tunnel.]
