COMPULSORY QUESTION

THE BRITISH CRIME SURVEY

The British Crime Survey is a large scale piece of research which attempts to discover accurate information about crime rates and types of crime in the UK. Structured interviews were the chosen research method and for the first time in 1996 computer assisted structured interviews were used. This involved allowing the respondent to read standardised questions on the screen and answer the questionnaire directly into the computer. The sample to be interviewed was selected from areas around the UK in an attempt to represent the population as a whole. The survey included questions on a range of topics, one of which was domestic violence. Structured interviews have many advantages and the use of computers helps to make this method even more useful with certain topics.
